

Errol McKellar is a prostate cancer survivor and founder of The Errol McKellar Foundation

After finding out by pure chance that he had the disease in late 2010, Errol had an operation to remove his prostate, followed by weeks of radiotherapy as the cancer had started to spread.

On his return to work as a mechanic some months later, he felt it was his calling to offer men 20% discount if they went to have their PSA blood test to check for prostate cancer. His actions saved many lives.

Over the years, Errol has made it his mission to raise the awareness of prostate cancer as it affects too many men and their families in the UK and that was the beginning of The Errol McKellar Foundation with the MOT Yourself campaign and motto

‘Guys it’s a simple blood test!’

Errol is raising funds to get a mobile PSA blood testing vehicle, so that it can go into local communities, enabling men to have a PSA blood test without having to visit their GP, unless they test positive.

Errol’s tireless efforts to raise the awareness have been recognised over the years, notably an NHS Heroes Award, he was honoured to receive an MBE in 2021 and was given the Diversity and Inclusion Award at the National Men and Boys Awards in 2022.

For further information and to make a donation, please visit the website www.theerrolmckellarfoundation.com and/or www.motyoursself.org.uk

